MITCHELL WAS TOO EASY FOR CORBETT.

SPORTS TALK OVER THE JACKSONVILLE BATTLE.

Englishman Was No Match Whatever, For the American Champion—Crowd Disappointed at the Shortness of the Contest—Wild Enthusiasm for the Winner.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 26—Nearly all the sports have departed. Corbett and Mitchell appeared in court this morning, and their cases were put off until February. Corbett will go to New York and Mitchell to St. Augustine. It is frankly conceded that Mitchell entered the ring yesterday in the pink of condition. His eyes were bright and his color good, and when he sat down and extended his arms along the ropes behind him he was the picture of nonchalance. Corbett, on the contrary, appeared a trifle nervous and a bit peaked and drawn. His face, naturally colorless, seemed paler than usual and his replies to Billy Delaney, who attempted to joke with him, were noticeably short. Looking at the two men as they sat with coats thrown loosely over their shoulders, there appeared to be little difference between them as to build, although Mitchell weighed in at only 163 pounds and Corbett at 184½. When they stood up, however, the disparity was noticeable. The Californian, long and thin, with arms like piston rods, looked as clearly to overmatch Mitchell as a lightweight of Jack McAuliffe's former position would some bantam like George Dixon. It was only in the breadth of the shoulders and in the remarkable strength of the legs that Mitchell could be said to outpoint his adversary.

Mitchell was helped into the ring by his seconds and trainers—Jim Hall, Steve O'Donnell, Jack Fogarty and Harry Darrin, and Bat Masterson stood behind him below the ropes. Corbett was escorted into the ring by his manager, Brady; his trainer, Billy Delaney, and Jack Dempsey. There was a lot of preliminary wrangling on the platform, in which Mitchell as well as the crowd joined. John Kelly, the former manager of the Louisville club, umpire of the national league and present saloon keeper, in New York, did not show much of the quality of calmness with which he has been credited. He was petulant and angry at times, and once when Mitchell came too close to him he pushed him savagely away. There were objections from both sides against everything—the gloves, the platform and the ropes. Corbett put in a vigorous kick against the posts. Mitchell's people wanted to argue over Kelly's instructions about clinching and breaking away. Mitchell, of course, wanted all the advantages he could get for infighting, which is his strong point, and without which he would be no better than a cripple against the long-arm punches of the other "pug."

Mitchell's seconds were Jim Hall, Pony Moore, Tom Allen and Steve O'Donnell; timekeeper, Bat Masterson.

Corbett's seconds were John Donaldson, Billy Delaney, Jack Dempsey and William McMillan; timekeeper, Ted Foley.

Snapper Garrison was timekeeper for the club.

Following is a description of the fight by rounds:

Round 1—Corbett sprang from his corner as if he had suddenly been released from restraint, and Mitchell in a more leisurely manner walked to the center to meet him. Both men began cautiously feeling their way, but all the disposition to get together was displayed by Corbett. With easy, light action, without so much as a feint. Corbett worked his opponent to the ropes and along each side of the square, Mitchell cleverly escaping from each corner. After a complete tour of the stage Mitchell feinted with his left and then led with it for Corbett's ribs, but Corbett was elsewhere in a flash. Corbett led his left and landed a glancing blow on Mitchell's jaw. The Englishman clinched. After the breakaway Mitchell landed on Corbett's wind and got Jim's left on his nose in return. Mitchell then led twice in quick succession, but failed each time to reach the shifty Californian. On the third attempt he landed lightly on Corbett's wind, but took in pay a bang on the nose which reddened that organ. Charlie's next lead reached Jim's jaw, but only lightly, and again, for a mere touch, the Englishman took another hard one flush in the face that jolted his head. In this round Corbett did enough to make Charley take a more serious view of the situation, and before the round was over Corbett was laughing at his opponent. Jim was readier and rather nicer in obeying the referee's instructions to break away.

Round 2—Work was resumed by Mitchell leading with his left and catching Jim squarely on the mouth. Then for the first and only time he tried forcing the fight, but his blows fell short and a little aggressive work seemed to discourage him. Corbett again resumed the offensive and soon had Mitchell in a corner, where he landed his left heavily on the mouth. There was a brisk rally in which Mitchell received some stiff punches in the neck, and cleverly dodged a right swing. Toward the close of the round Corbett had worked Charlie over to the ropes, where, after a mix up, he landed a straight left drive on Charlie's left temple and dropped him. At this point Corbett utterly lost his head. If it had not been for Referee Kelly's heavy restraining hand he would then and there have lost the fight on a foul. He was frantic to get at his man and finish him, actually struggling with the big referee to dash at Mitchell every time the Englishman got up on one knee. The gong sounded and the end of the fight was delayed by the call of time.

Round 3—During the minute's rest the referee very seriously warned Corbett about fouling, and his seconds implored him to keep his head and not lose the prize that was plainly his if he did not foul. When the gong sounded Mitchell came up slowly and Corbett sprang at him. There was only one fighter in the ring, and that was Corbett. He rushed Charley into a corner, where, after punching him in the nose with his left and drawing blood, he swung on his jaw and knocked him down. Again he lost his head, and Kelly alone could not keep him away from Mitchell, who, half dazed, was waiting his ten seconds. The attendants from Corbett's corner jumped in the ring and pushed Corbett away from his victim. Their arguments fell on deaf ears. The man was mad. The instant Mitchell was up Corbett plunged at him, smashing him in the mouth. Mitchell fell heavily, and the blood gushed from his mouth and nose. Again Corbett's seconds broke into the ring and wound their arms around him, for only in that way could they restrain him as the referee's hand marked the passing ten seconds. Every word the referee said, the counting of the timekeepers, the appeal of Corbett's seconds and the angry protests of Mitchell's friends, all these sounds were lost in the din of wild cheers as the beaten, bleeding Mitchell turned slowly on the floor and at last staggered to his feet. Instinct prompted him to put up his hands, but he stood a plain mark, defenseless and dazed. Corbett rushed at him, swinging his right and smashed a terrific blow square on Mitchell's jaw. The Englishman fell heavily on his side, rolled over on his face, senseless and knocked out. Corbett did not look at him again. Any man who could have struck that blow would know that the man who received it would have to be carried out of the ring. The spectators were nearly as crazy with excitement as the men on the platform and no one left the arena until after Mitchell's seconds had lifted him up and carried him to his corner. The lightning-like work of Corbett in the round had been too rapid for most of the spectators to follow and understand. They saw Mitchell knocked down three times in rapid succession, saw him stretched out senseless and bleeding, but how it was done was a question which was asked by hundreds of men who had been staring at the deed they asked to have explained.

When Jim Corbett reached the St. James hotel after the fight he was given an ovation. He jumped from his carriage and as he walked up the steps the cheering could have been heard for blocks. A crowd of 200 people followed him into the hotel, but he went at once to his room. He was arrested, but at once gave bonds.

It was but the work of a very few moments to bring Mitchell to his senses after he had been carried from the ring by his seconds. When he came to he admitted that he had been defeated by a better man than himself and was generous in his praise of the victor. His friends and seconds were not of the same mind, Masterson being especially outspoken. "Corbett is a dirty fighter," said he. "I think that he would have won, finally, for he is a bigger man in every respect, but I don't think he gave Charley a fair deal. There is no doubt that he fouled him at least twice in the second round."

Hall and O'Donnell viewed the matter in about the same light. They were all willing to concede that Corbett was the better man, but they deplored the tactics he pursued in the ring. They were feeling pretty blue, the defeated man himself being the most cheerful in the lot.

The Duval club announced that its gate receipts foot up $31,000. This will make the members even.

The betting at the ring side was 10 to 3 on Corbett, with few takers.

Ed Smith of Denver has challenged the winner to fight for $10,000 a side.

PAINTER HANGED THIS MORNING.

THE ROPE NEARLY TORE HIS HEAD OFF.

First Time the Halter Parted and the Condemned Man Had to Be Returned to the Scaffold--He Was Executed for Alice Martin's Murder.

CHICAGO, Jan. 26—Twice George Painter was taken to the scaffold this morning. The first time the rope broke and the second attempt nearly tore the condemned man's head off. He died protesting his innocence. The hanging was at 8 o'clock. Governor Altgeld decided last night that he would not again interfere, and for the third time the gallows was erected in the jail corridor. The condemned man protested his innocence to the last, but there can be very little doubt that he was guilty of the cowardly murder. Painter last night received no official notice of the governor's refusal to interfere in his case, but was informally advised by Sheriff Gilbert that there was no hope for him. Painter's face did not even pale when the news was told him. He said simply: "Well, I suppose if that is so, I cannot help it." He had been reprieved three times and confidently expected a commutation of the sentence.

SAFE-BLOWERS WORK AT DECATUR.

Two Stores Robbed, but the Thieves Frightened Away from a Third.

PORTLAND, Ind., Jan. 26.—A gang of safe-blowers made a raid on Decatur last night and blowed two safes successfully, but failed on the third. The first to be cracked was in James Luckey's store, and the thieves obtained $125 in cash. J. W. Place's wholesale store was next visited and $75 secured. The same thing was tried at another store, but the perpetrators of the job were frightened away. The officers have no clew, but think it was professional talent.

BOONE, Iowa, Jan. 25.—Burglars cracked the safe of the Nevada, Iowa, postoffice last night and got about $1,000 in money and stamps.

DYING STATEMENT ADMITTED.

Argument Over the Question the Feature in the Hart Trial.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Jan. 26.—The feature of the day in the Hart murder trial was the argument over the admission of the dying statement of Nellie Hart. The defense objected and the jury was excused for an hour while evidence was offered to the court regarding the statement. It was admitted. The evidence was devoted wholly to presenting the facts as already published.

Fears Trial in Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 26.—James V. McNamara, who is in jail charged with scandalizing Mother Rose Vincent, Father Dalton, and Father Lillis in his anti-Catholic lecture, was taken to Justice Latshaw's court room for trial yesterday morning. There his attorneys filed a motion for a change of venue out of the township, which was granted, and the cases were sent to Justice Nichols at Independence.

BILL TO BE KILLED BY HOOK OR CROOK.

COCKRAN CONTINUES HIS INCOME TAX FILLIBUSTER.

Janesville's Street Railway Builder the Only New Yorker Who Answered to His Name When the First Roll Call Was Ordered—Carlisle's Bond Issue Questioned.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26—Secretary Carlisle's right to issue bonds will be examined by congress. The judiciary committee of the house voted today 9 to 4 in favor of Bailey's resolution questioning the legality of the bond issue.

In the house today Cockran continued the filibustering of yesterday. He raised the point of no quorum at once and a roll call was demanded. Yesterday the call of the roll on Cockran's filibuster against the income tax showed the presence of 202 members—thirteen more than a quorum. Mr. Haines was the only democratic member of the New York delegation who answered to his name. The republican members from New York did not join in the filibuster, nor did the democrats from other states.

The rule limiting debate to five minutes was strictly enforced, and brief speeches were made by Messrs Marsh (rep., Ill.), Wheeler (dem., Ala.), Dingley (rep., Maine), and Springer (dem., Ill). At noon a vote was first taken on Mr. Terry's amendment, looking to the free entry of all the parts of cotton machinery as well as the finished machinery, and it was lost—yeas, 24; nays, 130. Mr. Cockran made a point of no quorum, and tellers were appointed. The amendment was lost—81 voting in the affirmative and 105 in the negative. The Hare amendment, providing for a tariff of 35 per cent on agricultural implements with provision for reciprocity, was lost on a rising vote—yeas, 10; nays, 187. On the substitute proposed by Mr. Payne, 74 in the affirmative and 100 in the negative voted, no quorum. On Mr. Cockran's demand of tellers, the substitute was lost—80 to 119. The standing vote on the original amendment offered by Mr. Robbins was: Yeas, 63; nays, 130, and the amendment was lost.

Mr. Draper (rep., Mass.) offered an amendment to the cotton manufactures schedule changing the duties from ad valorem to specific. It fixes the duty on cotton thread, yarn, warps, etc., up to and including No. 20 at five cents per pound and one-quarter of a cent for every additional size number. Mr. Stockdale (dem., Miss.) offered as a substitute a proposition that when articles grown in this country are sent abroad for manufacture into clothing or household articles for the use of the individual the finished article may be admitted free. Mr. Crawford (dem., N. C.) delivered a brief speech in favor of the Wilson bill. Mr. Hines (dem., Pa.) opposed the amendment offered by Mr. Draper. Mr. Johnson (rep., Ind.,) presented four petitions against the passage of the Wilson bill. Mr. Wanger (rep., Pa.) supported the amendment of Mr. Draper. Mr. Blair (rep., N. H.) and Mr. Stockdale (dem., Miss.) closed the debate, and the substitute proposed by Mr. Stockdale was defeated on a viva voce vote. Mr. Tracey (dem., N. Y.) called for a division, and tellers, and the substitute was again defeated—18 to 107.

On the Draper amendment Mr. Cockran demanded a division and tellers, and 75 in the affirmative and 109 in the negative passed between the tellers.

Mr. Wilson offered several amendments, which were agreed to without debate. One was to take crude opium from the free list and impose a tax of $1 per pound. The clause regarding binding twine was amended so as to include that from New Zealand hemp.

Mr. Wilson offered an amendment specifically repealing the reciprocity clause of the McKinley law. Mr Springer (dem., Ill.) offered an amendment to this providing "that all treaties heretofore made in accordance with the provisions of said section shall continue in force until abrogated by the terms of said treaties." Mr. Dingley (rep., Maine) showed that this would ask the countries with which we have made reciprocity treaties to continue those treaties in force after the benefits bestowed by those treaties have been withdrawn. Mr. Springer withdrew his amendment.

Mr. Coombs (dem. N. Y.) made a brief speech in which he favored reciprocity. Mr. Hendricks (dem., N. Y.) spoke in the same strain. Mr. Turner (dem., Ga.) opposed the reciprocity clause for the reason that it gave to the President the authority which the founders of the republic intended to vest in the house. Mr. Brookshire (dem., Ind.) denounced the reciprocity clause. Mr. Warner (dem., N. Y.) said he hoped the democratic party would not leave in the hands of the President the autocratic power conferred by the reciprocity clause.

Mr. Cockran (dem., N. Y.) opposed that provision of the McKinley law which made the President the dispensing power, as it might as well be extended so as to give him the power to dispense with other provisions.

Mr. Wilson (dem., W. Va.) spoke briefly in favor of the amendment. The vote was then taken and the amendment was agreed to.

After some unimportant amendments a small sized filibuster was started by Mr. Cockran and Mr. Hendricks (dem. N. Y.) on the question of limiting debate, but it was speedily killed and the amendment of Mr. Wilson was agreed to.

An amendment was then offered to the oil schedule, striking out the reciprocity feature. Mr. C. W. Stone (rep., Pa.) offered an amendment to this amendment excluding petroleum from the operation of Mr. Wilson's amendment. This was lost on a standing vote and the original amendment offered by Mr. Wilson, striking out the reciprocity feature from the oil schedule, was then carried.

Just before the last vote was taken Mr. Sickles (dem., N. Y.) took the floor and delivered an earnest plea against the proposed income tax.

Mr. Meredith (dem.) inveighed against the blocking of legislation such as had been so often attempted during the day. He declared himself as being in favor of an income tax.

At the night session Mr. Hutcheson (dem., Texas) was the first speaker, and was followed by Mr. Hicks (rep., Penn.). He denounced the Wilson bill as an act to abolish revenue and destroy American industries.

Mr. Cobb (dem., Ala.) was the next speaker. The other speakers were: Messrs Magner (Dem., N. Y.), Goodnight (dem., Ky.), Lynch (dem., Wis.), Grady (dem., N. C.), Gillette (rep., Mass.), Thomas (rep., Mich.), and Updegraff (rep., Iowa).

Will Not Impeach Judge Jenkins.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Mr. McGann says the story that he is going to have Judge Jenkins impeached is untrue. He is even uncertain as to what he will do should the committee to which his resolution of inquiry will be referred find that Judge Jenkins exceeded his authority. It will then, he thinks, be the committee's duty to act. Whatever the committee finds, it is pretty safe to predict that Judge Jenkins will not be impeached.

Senate Discusses Bonds.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—In the senate yesterday the Hawaiian resolutions were laid aside without action and Senator Allen addressed the senate in advocacy of the resolution offered by him last Thursday declaring the proposed issue of 5 per cent bonds illegal, and that the bonds, when issued, would be null and void.

DOINGS AT DES MOINES.

Prohibition the Foremost Question Now Before the Legislature.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Jan. 26.—Democratic members of the senate and house held a secret caucus yesterday, before the session began, to consider the course to be taken by them with reference to the liquor law, but no action was taken.

In the senate Mr. Perrin presented a joint resolution calling for the submission of a prohibitory amendment to the constitution to popular vote.

Mr. Griswold introduced bills appropriating $20,000 for the hospital for the insane at Independence and to appropriate $40,000 for an additional building at the Independence hospital for insane.

Other bills were presented authorizing second-class cities of 5,000 population to levy a tax for a paving fund; providing for the construction of highways; to prevent and punish fraudulent sales by itinerant venders; regulating private banks; to amend election law; providing for the payment of delinquent taxes by lien holders; extending the jurisdiction of justices' civil cases; establishing a uniform system of signals in mines; to prohibit the sale or giving of tobacco to minors under 16 years of age.

DR. MOYER'S OPINIONS.

Another Expert Tells What He Thinks of Cronin's Wounds.

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—Medical expert testimony occupied the time in the Coughlin trial to-day. The defense is introducing doctor after doctor to show, if possible, that the state's theory that Dr. Cronin's death was caused by the wounds on the head is untenable.

The expert on the stand was Dr. H. N. Moyer, ex-county physician. Dr. Moyer said he could not tell, from the description furnished him, whether the wounds had been inflicted before or after death. Advanced decomposition would so change the appearance of wounds as to make it impossible to determine.

Too Much Wanted Bunco Swindlers.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 25.—Before the notorious bunco swindlers, Henry D. Shaw and Hiram Bates, were sentenced to be imprisoned for twenty-one months each in Philadelphia yesterday a requisition from Illinois for the two for similar swindling was presented to the court. D. Gordon, sheriff of Rock Island county, Ill., wanted the pair. They have several Pennsylvania crimes to answer for after serving out their sentence for attempting to swindle Edward Ford out of $3,000.

To Close the New Switch Yards.

GALESBURG, Ill., Jan. 26.—The new switch yards of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy will be closed here today and business will be done until times are better in the old yards. General Manager Merrill said last night that the outlook was gloomy. He attributed the dull times to the uncertainty attending the tariff legislation, and thinks business will be dull until permanent conditions are restored.

French Occupy Timbuctoo.

PARIS, Jan. 26.—A dispatch to the Journal des Bats from St. Louis, Senegal, states that a French military column has occupied the city of Timbuctoo. The French force,

BISMARCK ENTERS BERLIN IN TRIUMPH.

EXCITEMENT OVER HIS COMING EFFECTS ALL.

The Aged Prince Reaches the City this Afternoon at One O'clock and is Met By the Emperor's Brother, Prince Henry—Special Trains Fill the Depots.

BERLIN, Jan. 26—Bismark arrived here at one o'clock this afternoon with his wife, son and two doctors. There was great excitement and an enthusiastic reception. The prince was met by the emperor's brother, Prince Henry. The excitement due to Bismark's visit permeates all classes. A report gained currency yesterday that the ex-chancellor would reach the city early in the day. Thousands of persons credited the report, and at noon Unter den Linden and the Lehrte railway station, where his highness will alight on his arrival from Friedrichsruhe, were crowded with people anxious to lend their voices to the cheers which will welcome the aged statesman to the city that has witnessed so many of his triumphs. They were disappointed, for the prince did not come, but this fact did not dampen the pent-up enthusiasm of the crowd, many of whom declared that they would remain until he did arrive, so as to give him a hearty welcome. At 12 o'clock a large number of the members of the landtag left the parliamentary building, all expressing great eagerness to ascertain if Prince Bismarck had left Friedrichsruhe. A grand procession will be formed to welcome him.

The people of Berlin will not be the only persons who will welcome the ex-chancellor. Trains arriving at the various stations are bringing from all parts of the country thousands of people who intend to take part in the demonstration. It is doubtful if any event in recent years in Germany has created such widespread enthusiasm as the visit of the prince.

STRIKERS OVERTURN A CAR.

Bridgeport Company Will Seek Protection from the Authorities.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Jan. 26.—An immense crowd gathered at the Traction company's stables last night. On East Main street a car was seized by the crowd and dragged two blocks, where it was overturned and left lying in the road. President Heft says he will call on the mayor and sheriff to furnish protection to-day, when an attempt will be made to run cars by non-union men. Serious trouble is feared. The situation is more critical than it was Wednesday. The strikers claim the president of the company has repudiated the promises made.

Fire at Springfield, Ill.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 26.—A fire at 3:10 yesterday called the fire department to the house of Senator Palmer, occupied by State Treasurer Ramsay and family. The fire originated in the cellar, from the furnace, and before it was brought under control had completely gutted the entire building. The members of the family got out safely.

SHERMAN, Texas, Jan. 26.—The frame mill of the Sherman Oil and Cotton company burned yesterday afternoon in this city. The loss is estimated at $100,000 and is covered by insurance.

Fifteen Passengers Cremated.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 26.—A dispatch from Orenburg says that a serious accident in which fifteen persons lost their lives occurred near Samara, on the line connecting Orenburg and Samara, in southeast Russia. A passenger and freight train ran into each other. There were cars loaded with petroleum in the freight train and these caught fire, resulting in the burning of the wrecked cars. Many of those who lost their lives were burned to death.

Salary Law Is Constitutional.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 26.—The Supreme court has decided the law constitutional which abolished the fee system for county officials and substituted salaries. The law was contested by the sheriff of Vigo county. The bill that passed the legislature had a clerical error in that the officials of Shelby county were not included, and on this error its enemies attempted to have it killed on the plea of class legislation.

Stitler Turns State's Evidence.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Feb. 26.—Bob Stitler, the fourth member of the Seminole train robbers, appeared unexpectedly at the trial yesterday as a witness for the prosecution. He made a confession, telling the story of the robbery. All four were held under $8,000 bail. They are Henry Turner, Bob Rogers, Willis Brown, and Stitler.

Billiard Experts to Meet in Boston.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 26.—Schaefer, Slosson and Ives will play a billiard tournament here Feb. 7, 9 and 10 at Bumstead hall. Each of the three will play two games, which will be for 600 points each at fourteen-inch balk line, with anchor shot barred.

Mr. Childs Will Probably Recover.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 26.—The condition of George W. Childs shows slight improvement. It is said that Mr. Childs' condition has been very serious, but that now his physicians believe he will ultimately recover.

'PHONES TO BE CHEAP AFTER THIS MONTH.

THE "HELLO" MILLENIUM SEEMS TO BE APPEARING.

In a Short Time a Telephone May Be Bought for an Amount Equal to Six Months' Rental at Present—Patent on the Receiver Runs Out.

The telephone millenium is almost at hand. The Bell company control of the receiver will cease on February 1 and after that date the people will be able to buy telephones about as they do hats and caps. A citizen who does not live too far away will be able to establish a telephone line between his house and his office for $35 and have no rent to pay for it. But on account of patents which will be still in force it will not be possible to establish any private line that will require a switch board.

The fundamental Bell telepone patent expired on March 7 of last year. The Bell company, it was found, however, still owned the patent on the receiver, and no telephone system would be of much use without a receiver. Among other concerns which entered into the telephone business upon the expiration of the original Bell patent was the Shaver corporation of Pittsburg, Pa. The Bell company brought suit against the Shaver corporation on the receiver, citing the patent of Alexander Graham Bell, of January 30, as the one infringed. An injuction was promptly granted, and that put an end to the opposition telephone business for the time being. But the patent of Jan. 30, 1877, is now about to expire, and thus both receiver and the transmitter will be free to the public.

New Instruments Very Cheap.

It is evident from the preparations now being made by manufacturers of electrical apparatus that a big boom is expected in the sale of telephones. A large number of instruments have been made and these will be put on the market January 31. Many large contracts have been made for the supply of telephones after that date. All these new instruments will be sold outright. None will be rented. They do not differ in appearance from those of the Bell company, and are similar in construction. Being new, they are superior to most of the instruments supplied by the Bell Telephone company, and which have been in use for years.

In regard to the patents on the Blake transmitter, the most practical transmitter ever used in this country for general exchange work, the records in the patent office at Washington show that on November 29, 1891, four patents were granted to Frances Blake. The applications on which these patents were granted were all filed in 1881 and prior to the date of these patents, and in fact prior to the filing of the several applications therefor in the United States patent office; patents in a large number of foreign countries had been obtained, including an English patent under date of January 30, 1879. A British patent is invariably granted for the term of fourteen years from date.

Have All But a Patent Switch.

"Now since the public have both a receiver ond a transmitter, which can shortly be used," said a local telephone man recently, "let us see what additional apparatus is necessary to employ in order to equip a telephone exchange in such a manner as to enable subscribers to obtain satisfactory service. In the first place, we find that a means of signaling must be employed and we find that the magnetic bell, now in common use for that purpose, is covered by several patents which, however, are upon specific mechanism, and are of such a nature that they can be overcome, but for the sake of dispelling any doubts as regards a convenient method of signaling, it is a fact that there are practical methods of signaling, patented and not patented, which may be employed.

"In regard to difficulty arising in obtaining a suitable switch board for the purpose of facilitating the connecting of one person's line with another, it is a well known fact that such a switch can now be purchased in the open market, although there are various patents on switch-boards employed by the American Bell Telephone company, covering specific mechanism.

Many Private Lines.

"It would seem to a man on the fence that a great many persons had taken the trouble to find out just how many of the telephone patents have expired and also inquired into the patents now in force, and that if the testimony of a large number of eminent patent attorneys and acknowledged telephone experts is of any value in the premises, January 30, 1894, will open a new era in telephony and not only bring about a material reduction in the cost of telephone service, but make it possible for the public to receive the benefit of valuable devices intended for use in connection with the electric telephone, which devices they are at present unable to use."

The most determined opposition with which the Bell Telephone company will meet after its patent has expired is in Chicago There the Western Telephone Construction company has been organized with a large capital and a patent switch board of its own. Subsidiary companies have been organized in many of the large cities of the northwest.

In view of the expiration of its patent the Bell company, it is said, has about decided to abandon the private line business and the independent telephone systems in the small country towns. At present the Bell company charges $850 a year for a private line.

BURNS PARTY THIS EVENING.

A Fine Programme to Be Presented at the Armory at 7:30 O'clock.

Governor Peck and other notables will be present at the Burns festival in the Armory tonight. Captain "Jack" Crawford, the Poet Scout, will be a new feature, and one that all will take pleasure in hearing. M. G. Jeffriss will deliver the address on Burns and the musical part of the programme will be in competent hands. Miss Kate Campbell, Miss Flaws and Captain Crawford arrived from Chicago at noon.

The following poem in honor of the anniversary was sent to President James Mills by Rev. Laurence Sinclair, formerly of Trinity church but now of Evansville:

SCOTLAND.

I love thee, Scotland, dearest home,
And while on other lands I roam,
I ever will remember thee
And all the friends so dear to me,
Thy hills and valleys, trees and flowers,
Where I in childhood's sunny hours
Spent many a joyful holiday
With school companions young and gay;
Or at the blazing fire by night
In winter time, when clothed in white
With snowy mantle were thy fields
While on the house that safety yields
In stormy blast, we sat and told
Of thy great heroes strong and bold,
Who for thy rights their lives laid down,
That they might thee with freedom crown.
We sang thy songs which brought to mind
Though like a cloud with silver lined
Bright hopes for youth, and joy for all,
From Burns whose welcome songs engage
The hours of recreation sweet
To song where lovers gently meet;
This was the way we spent our time
And finished off with "Auld Lang Syne."
Now in America we be;
The "Stars and Stripes" shall keep us free,
And sons of Scotland we remain,
"Let Glasgow Flourish" still the same,
And fair as "merry month of May"
Be Edinburgh rich and gay.
May blue bells and the heather bloom
And "Banks and Braes o' Bonnie Doon"
Be ever as they were before
In beauty as in days of yore.
May we the sons of Scotland here
Do what is right and never fear
Be kind to others, and maintain
The honor of great Scotland's name.

The exercises tonight will begin at 7:30.

Smith's full orchestra will furnish music for the dance which will conclude the evening's festivities. Tickets admitting gentleman and lady, $1.25; extra lady, 50 cents.

OPTICIANS ARE NOT OCULISTS.

Many of This City Suffer From Diseases of the Eye.

That a man may become a good optician, and know nothing about diseases of the eye, is generally conceded. The work of the optician, fitting spectacles, being purely mechanical, and the knowledge readily attained, the degree of expertness and success attained by the optician depends largely on his skill and opportunities. A man with natural genius and extensive experience may become an expert optician, the same as some other man with the same degree of intelligence may become the master of some other line of mechanics. This is why there are so many good opticians.

The work of the oculist, however, is of a different order, going beyond the range of mechanism and dealing with one of the most intricate and delicate branches of science.

You find the successful optician in every city in the country, while the successful oculist, you rarely ever find outside of the large cities.

Dr. H. A. McChesney has long been recognized as one of the best oculists in the country. His extensive practice and wide experience has kept him in touch with advanced science, and thoroughly equipped him for his work. He removes cataract and treats all diseases of the eye with wonderful success Dr. McChesney is not only a good oculist, but he is a thorough optician as well, and for the convenience of his many patients he has decided to put in an optical department. His stock is already bought, and his rooms are now being arranged for this branch of the business.

The doctor claims that many people who wear glasses need treatment for imperfect vision before being examined for glasses. He proposes to give his patients the benefit of his combined skill. If you are having trouble with your eyes, consult him at his office in the Wilcox block.

THOUGHT THE FLOOR WAS COMING DOWN.

COUNTY TREASURER BURDICK HAD A SCARE.

Plaster of His Office Ceiling Fell With a Crash and He Thought that the Crowd Up Stairs Was Too Heavy For the Building to Sustain.

County Treasurer Burdick made a lively move to get out of the court house when the plastering in his room, which is directly under the court room, cracked and commenced falling, for he imagined the floor was giving way under the great pressure of the crowd witnessing the murder trial. A careful examination showed that it was an old crack in the plaster, which had been made in changing the heating pipes, and that some one above had leaned heavily against the radiator, which allowed the loose plaster to drop.

WEDDED BENEATH FLOWERS.

Doolittle--Austin.

The home of G. H. Austin in Evansville was the scene of a pleasant social event on Wednesday evening. The occasion was the marriage of Miss Lina Austin, niece of the host, to Charles D. Doolittle, son of W. H. Doolittle of the Evansville Mercantile Association.

The ceremony was performed by the pastor of the Methodist church, and the parlors were hung with flags and fragrant with flowers. The wedding march was by Mrs. J. Grant Doolittle of Madison. The bride was dressed in tan Henrietta trimmed with seal brown, and wore white roses and diamonds.

The presents were beautiful and finely chosen, among them were the following:

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Doolittle, oak wood dining table and chairs; Mr. and Mrs. William S. Austin, a very beautiful parlor spool center table; Mr. and Mrs J. E. Doolittle, Brodhead, Wis., elegant rug; Mr. and Mrs. George W. Acheson, Magnolia, Wis., silver pickle dish and fork; Mrs. Mary Holdredge. Janesville, Wis., fruit dish; Mr. and Mrs A S. Lee, Janesville, Wis., linen table cloth; Maud King, nut cracker and picks; Alice M. Barnes, linen table cloth; G. H. Austin, two pair linen towels; Mr. and Mrs. George F. Lee, Magnolia, Wis., linen table cloth; Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Lee, Mr and Mrs. S. E. Barnard, beautiful water set and fruit dish; Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Young and Miss Ida a handsome rocker; H. L. Austin, dessert spoons; Nito Brown, Nathaniel Austin, set of silver fruit knives; compliments of the Grange store clerks, silver cracker dish; Mrs. Hurlburt, Mr. and Mrs. Ahara, linen table cloth; Mr. and Mrs Perry Wilder; berry dish and gold lined berry spoon; Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Richardson, fruit dish; Mrs. L. C. Wackman, silver butter knife and gold lined sugar spoon.

THE COST OF A FOOL EXPLAINED

Rev. Jenk Ll. Jones Speaks Entertainingly at All Souls Church.

"The Cost of a Fool" was the very novel title of a very novel lecture that Janesville people heard at All Souls church last night when Rev. Jenk Ll. Jones of Chicago, the former pastor of the church opened the course of lectures mapped out by that congregation. He classified fools under three heads specifying them like this; first, intellectual fools; social fools; and third ethical or moral fools.

"The easiest studied is the most persistent and common type, the first mentioned—the one with the empty head," he said. "How expensive and troublesome is this fellow who doesn't know anything. What a weight on the community he is. In vain does the state build for him school houses The government offers to him broad homesteads for the taking to little purpose. Preachers may pray for him and with him. Women will plead and work for him. Policemen will cudgel him and still he is hopelessly is the way. In the church he is mumbling the obsolete creeds of some great-grandfather. In politics he still votes and hurrahs for Andrew Jackson. He is simply hopelessly, persistently in the way, obstructing the wheels of progress, poisoning society with his vitiated breath and choking the prophet and reformer with the rope of his heavy stupidity. He is so numerous. Where knowledge marshals her hundreds, ignorance moves her battalions a million strong. The prophets occupy the heights, but the fools swarm in the valleys. There is a terrible reality in the grim sarcasm of Carlyle when he said: "England has thirty million inhabitants, mostly fools"

The lecture was a most interesting one, and a large audience listened.

A HUMAN BATTERY.

A Man Who Is too Full of Electricity to Be Tolerated.

For thirty-five years Oswell Powell has lived the life of a hermit in the woods, six miles north of Hadlyme, Conn., in a locality known as Partridge Run. The man's seclusion was forced upon him by a circumstance that happened when he was about 28 years old. At that time Powell was a prosperous and happy young farmer. He had been two years married and his domestic relations were extremely pleasant.

While attending the county fair one day he came across a friend who was anxious to test his ability to hold electricity and the two sought a battery that was doing a heavy business in the fakir's corner of the fair ground.

The men tried the machine, and a good-natured dispute as to who was the best man arose between them. Powell's friend claimed that he could hold the most electricity, and he started in to prove it. He sent the needle around the dial to the 320 mark. Powell pulled off his coat and clutched the handles. The operator sent a stream of electricity into him that took the crook out of his elbows and caused him to stand on tiptoe. Still Powell called for more, and got it. The needle swung around eighty points, and yet Powell howled for more. The charge was sent into him, and, leaping into the air, he came down flat on his back. He had put the needte up to the 410 mark, but nearly killed himself doing it. He was dazed for several hours, but finally came out of it apparently all right.

In less than six months after his experience there was trouble in the Powell house. Mrs. Powell left her husband and refused to live with him any longer. She said that he was kind to her, but there was something about the man that repelled her, and the strange power, whatever it was, seemed to be growing on him.

Powell told his father-in-law that he hadn't felt like himself since the day that he tried his hand at the electric machine. He said that he couldn't blame his wife, and he made no effort to reclaim her. It was evident that Powell's nerves had, somehow, been seriously affected. Expert medical advice was taken, and a good deal of money was spent by Powell in searching for a cure, but to no purpose. The strange power grew upon him, and finally became so strong that the cattle shrank from his touch.

Finally Mrs. Powell was induced to return to her husband's house, but the two occupied separate apartments. They lived in this way for three years, then Powell left, and took up his residence in a house that he built in Partridge Run.

The man suffered a great deal of pain just before a thunder-storm. He is a sort of a human barometer, and during the haying season the farmers consult the man regarding the weather probabilities. His prognostications are seldom incorrect, and the visits of his neighbors in the summer season became so annoying to him that he adopted the plan of pasting weather bulletins on a tree near the road so that the farmers could get an idea what the weather was going to be without disturbing him.

During the time that Powell suffers pain medicine has no effect on him. The most powerful sedative administered to him is as so much water. The only relief that he gets is by laying his hands on cats, and he has surrounded himself with these animals, that appear to be warmly attached to him. When he feels a spell of suffering coming on he takes to stroking the cats, and by this means his suffering is greatly lessened.

That Settled It.

"The whole question can be settled by one word," said the man who thinks Bacon wrote about everything we know of except "After the Ball."

"What word is that?"

"'Hamlet.' There's the whole cipher wadded up into the title of that one play."

"I don't quite follow you."

"Of course you don't. That's what makes it a cipher, you see. You have to study it out. Now I've studied it. Anybody with an idea of the construction of the English language can see that 'Hamlet' is a diminutive of 'ham.'"

"Y-yes."

"So, instead of using his own name, Bacon used the very next thing to it, and there you have the whole business just as plain as day."

Anything to Oblige.

Mr. Greatman—I wish you'd stop printing my portrait every time any little thing happens to me, or else get a new one. You've had that old plate in seventeen times.

Editor—All right, my dear sir. Anything to oblige.

Assistant Foreman, a week later—I can't find that picture of Sam, the sneak-thief, anywhere.

Foreman—Well, dump in that old picture of Mr. Greatman. It ain't going to be used for him any more.

What Will Do It?

Medical writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will reach the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is proof positive that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. Our druggists keep it.

The Complexion of a Chinese

Is not yellower than that of an unfortuna'e individual whose liver complaint has assumed the chronic form. The eyeballs of the sufferer assume a saffron hue, there is dull pain in the region of the organ affected, the tongue is coated, b eath sour, sick headaches usually but not always occur, and there is sometimes dizziness on arising from a sitting posture. Constipation and dyspepsia are also ttendants of this very common ailment, alw ys in its aggravated form, liable to breed abscesses of the liver, which are very dangerous. Hostetter s Stomach Bitters wholly eradicates it,as well as the troubles complicated with it and which it originates. In chills and fever, a complaint which always yields to the Bitters, the liver is seriously involved. This fine alternate tonic removes costiveness and indigestion. rheumatic, nervous and kidney trouble and debility.

G.A.R. NOTICE

We take this opportunity of informing our subscribers that the new Commissioner of Pensions has been appointed. He is an old soldier, and we believe that soldiers and their heirs will receive justice at his hands. We do not anticipate that there will be any radical changes in the administration of pension affasrs under the new regime.

We would advise, however, that U S. soldiers, sailers, and their heirs, take steps to make application at once, if they have not already done so, in order to secure the benefit of the early filling af their claims in case there should be any future pension legislation. Such legislation is seldom retrospecive. Therefore it is of great import that applications be filed in the department at the earliest possible time.

If U. S. Soldiers, or their widowed children, or parents desire informotion in regard to pension matters, that should write to the Press Claims Company at Washington, D. C., and they will prepare and send the necessary application, if they find them entitled under the numerous laws enacted for their benefit. Address;

DEMOCRATIC SOUP HOUSES.

People who visited Chicago during the recent storm noticed gangs of soup house men shoveling snow and cleaning streets, three hours a day, for two meals and a place to sleep. The faces of many of these unfortunate men told a pitiful story. Men who do not belong to the tramp class, but whose necessities have driven them to the verge of starvation are compelled to accept the hospitality of the great city.

These conditions are a sad commentary on the failure of a democratic administration. Every intelligent man knows that if the manufacturing industries of the country were not paralyzed the masses would find honorable employment and be self supporting. Idleness begets suffering and it begets crime as well. The enforced idleness of the country is generating both paupers and criminals, and yet in the face of these grave facts a democratic congress has the hardihood to trifle with the only question of vital importance before the country today.

Settle the question of tariff definitely either one way or the other, give the country reduction or absolute free trade, so that manufacturers may have some basis for their wage scales, and business would resume in thirty days. The question of labor no longer enters into the situation. Men can be hired for any price employers are willing to pay. The mischief has already been accomplished as far as the laboring classes are concerned. What interests the people now is work. The dollar a day for bread is better than the soup houses. Humiliate labor and society is demoralized. Honest toil supplied to the honest toiler, is practical charity. A democratic congress will long be held responsible for present conditions. If the party of reform has any regard for its future it will call a speedy halt.

Feeling that Virginia is still in his debt, Fitz Lee is in the field for a congressional nomination this fall. He would better be careful. He was defeated for the senate by a man with no F. F. V. connections, and other defeat of that sort will effectually destroy the prestige of the Lee family, once so powerful in Old Dominion.

It must be pleasant to those who really wish to see a bridge built between New York and Jersey city to see the question used as a weapon in the Hill-Cleveland combat. It also gives the country an opportunity to size up the democratic idea of statesmanship.

No wonder the administration objected to the figure of a naked man on one side of the Columbian medals. It feared that posterity would think it referred to the nakedness made so common among our people by the Cleveland financial and tariff policy.

Senator Quay says of the situation: "The administration has produced a condition of affairs which has destroyed trade, foreign and domestic, and greatly diminisheh the revenue, internal and from customs.

Corbett was lately threatened with arrest for burglary. It would not be a legitimate subject for grief if he and Mitchell could both be given long terms for something.

A Contractor's Advice.

Dullman's German Medicine Co.: Gentlemen I take great pleasure in testifying in behalf of Dullman's German Blood, Liver, Stomach and Kidney Cure. I can safely say that I never took such medicine as that to cleanse the stomach and kidneys. I was suffering for years with biliousness, indigestion and loss of appetite and sleep. One bottle of it did me more good than six months' other treatment, and I feel it my duty to testify in its behalf, so others may try it and get cured.

This is reputed to be the highest valuation of Chicago land yet established.

THE BURDEN REMOVED.

Mammy Thought She Heard the Lord Calling and She Did Not Hesitate.

Within 200 feet of the crest of Mount Mitchell the rough road winding over the mountain runs close to the edge of a cliff, down which you can drop a plummet for over 100 feet. At the base the waters of a creek dash furiously along toward the Catawba. As you peep over the cliff you can see the waters boiling and foaming among the rocks far below, and your flesh creeps and your blood runs cold at the mere thought of a fall, says the Boston Journal.

An hour before sunset on a July day I sat on a rock by the roadside with this cliff at my left. My pipe was scarcely alight, when an old woman, walking slowly by the help of a cane, and her calico sunbonnet pulled forward to shade her weak eyes from the sun, came slowly down the mountain road. She saw me and peered and hesitated, and finally came forward and saluted:

"Howdy, stranger?"

"Howdy, grandma? Going down?"

"No farther, I reckon. This is the steep place, hain't it?"

"Yes; there is a cliff here."

"I thought so, but my eyes are very poor. Yes. I'm old and blind, and of no use to anybody. I've prayed to the Lawd every day for a year to take me away, but he don't hear me."

"Is your husband dead?"

"Years and years ago, stranger."

"But you have children?"

"Yes, but I am a burden to them. I'm no good any more. I've been fearful this long while, but it didn't come till this mawnin'. I had my mind made up what I should do, and now I'm going to do it."

"What is it; what has happened?"

"I've been fearful of William and Jane. William is a good boy, but they is pore and don't get along. This mawnin' I heard 'em talkin'. Jane says I'm too ole to work any more, and I must go to the poorhouse. William thinks it over, and says there's no other way. He'll see about it to-morrow."

"But the needs of an old woman like you can't be much of a burden to them," I protested.

"No," she sighed, "but ole folks is in the way of younger ones. I've dun prayed and prayed, but the Lawd won't take me. Mebby he thinks I ain't fitten to go, but I've tried hard to live clus up to the good book. If I hain't fitten to go now I never shall be."

"But it's a son's duty to care for his mother."

"I've heard that said, and I reckon I've done read somethin' like it in the scriptur', but we is all pore critters. What we want to do is our dooty. What we don't want to do kin be left fur somebody else."

"If your son has a home he can't have the heart to turn you out of it, even if it is a struggle to get along," I said as the poor old woman held her apron to her face.

"Stranger, do you know 'bout the Lawd's ways?" she asked through her tears.

"I'm afraid I don't—not as I ought to."

"Don't he take old folks up thar in heaven when they ain't no mo' use down yere?"

"In his own good time, yes."

"I've been ready fur this long time," she sobbed, "but mebbe I'm too old and pore and blind to be sent fur. If I'm fitten to go the Lawd orter take me."

"How far up the road does your son live?"

"'Bout a mile, I reckon."

"Come, I'll help you along."

"Yo' gwine that way?"

"Yes."

"Then say to William, if yo' see him that I sha'nt trouble him no mo'."

I argued and protested and coaxed, but she refused to move I cautioned her to remain on the rock and started off up the road, thinking to call at the cabin and send some of them down for her. A hundred feet away I halted and looked back. She had left the rock and was on the brink of the cliff. I ran down to clutch at her, but when within twenty feet she called out:

"Stranger, you've come back, but too late! I was troubled because the Lawd had not called me. He has just dun called!"

"Wait! Hold on! You'll be over!"

"Oh, Lawd! take a pore ole lone woman who's a burden on her children!" prayed the woman, with hands upraised, and as I sprang forward to clutch at her dress the faded calico tore away in my hand, and she went on down to death.

Not a cry of despair or shriek of alarm as she plunged downward. A dull sound came up to me, and when I peered over the cliff I saw the white waters carrying her mangled body down to the river beyond. At the cabin a mile away I found a man and his wife leaning on the fence in front. I told them what had happened. There was no alarm, no anxiety, no word of sorrow. They did not look at me, not even at each other. There was silence for a moment, and then, with eyes looking into the forest, the son replied:

"Yes, that was mammy, fur shore!"

"Fur shore!" echoed the woman.

Heart Failure.

HOW TO AVOID IT.

The epitaph on many a tombstone is "heart failure." No wonder, when we consider the immense strain which is put on that small organ. Marvelous as it is, beating 100,000 times and exerting a force equal to 5,184,000 pounds daily, it has its limit—its endurance often is too severely tested. So common are diseases of the heart—though often for a considerable time without the suspicions of the afflicted person being in the least excited—that it is stated that one person in four has a bad heart! Dr. Franklin Miles, of Elkhart, Ind., has for years made a special study of all diseases of the heart, and his remarkable success has made his name a familiar one in all parts of our land. He has found the most common symptoms of heart disease to be pain, distress or tenderness in the chest, back, stomach, bowels, left shoulder and arm, shortness of breath, smothering spells, fainting, etc.

Mr. George R. Smith, of Barnes, Yates Co., N. Y., writes:—"DR. MILES' NEW HEART CURE has worked wonderfully on mind and body so I can do a good day's work. I feel ten years younger and take more interest in affairs. I had shortness of breath, palpitation, pain under left shoulder blade, pain around the heart, I could not sleep on my right side. Since I have taken Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure I sleep well, and have no palpitation. It has made my heart stronger. I wish you would print this, because I want all to know what Dr. Miles' Heart Cure has done for me."

"For months my wife suffered with palpitation, smothering spells, and was unable to sleep on her left side. She tried several doctors without relief. Your Heart Cure was recommended. After taking three bottles she fully recovered her health. Your medicines do what you claim."—CHAS. CHRISTIAN, Toledo, O.

DOCTORS ACCUSED OF MAKING FACTS.

MEDICAL EXPERTS ARRAIGNED BY ASHTON'S ATTORNEY.

Dr. Palmer's Notes Showed One Thing, Attorney Hyzer Declares, While Verbal Testimony Included Much In Addition—Mr. Winans Says Bribery Stories Are Ridiculous.

Rather sensational points were covered in the arguments in the Stone murder case to-day.

Mr. Winans opened the case for the defense when Mr. Dunwiddie ceased speaking. He said that the case was important to the state and terribly important to the defendant. He spoke of Ashton's good character and his having made a name for honesty and uprightness. The charge against him was as cruel as death and as hungry as the grave, born of malice and unfounded in fact. It rested upon whispering accusations of a few men, mutterings that would poison men's minds and wreck the reputation of any man. He told how the coroners jury had considered all the evidence that they had in the case but no arrest resulted. It remained for the grand jury to act seven months afterward. Stories were circulated by men of malicious mind and the suspicion was generated. Then the grand jury returned their indictment. The defendant was ready for trial in April, Mr. Winans continued, but this was the first opportunity that he had had to present his case. What Ashton had told himself was substantially all the prosecution had to base their case on.

MRS. CAROLINE STONE,
Whose Mysterious Death Caused The Trial.

Was There a Murder?

The three main issues were held to be:

"Was it suicide?"

"Was it murder?"

"If murder, who did it?"

The state not only had to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that murder was committed but that the defendant was beyond a reasonable doubt, the murderer. If either fact was not established the jury would have to acquit the defendant. Mrs. Stone committed suicide, he said, and backed up his theory with the statement of Dr. W. O. Coffee as to Mrs. Stone's mental condition. He pictured her as melancholy, dejected and ready to die. She did die in less than ten days and by her own deliberate act. She was jealous of Ashton and his wife It was immaterial to the case whether the jealousy was well founded or not.

He told how the weight of years had weighed Mr. Stone down and how Ashton had been sent for to lighten his burdens. Mrs. Stone had been building on the hope that she and her family would get the estate. Mr Winans told how the Ashton family had been warred upon until charges of all kinds were rife. At length Mrs Stone became jealous almost to insanity. He referred to Mr. Murwin's testimony of the relations between Mr Stone and Mrs. Ashton in no very complimentary way. Drs. Palmer and Mills, he insisted, said that Mrs. Stone was drowned. Dr. Kempster and Dr. Whiting said she was dead when she went into the cistern. Thus the state's expert witnesses disagreed, and the old adage came into play: "When doctors disagree who shall decide?" Upon their own statements there was nothing about their testimony but doubt. There was no evidence to show that Mr. Ashton clubbed Mrs, Stone in the state's testimony.

Ashton Didn't Want to Stay.

After recess Mr. Winans took up the theory that Ashton did not want to remain, but wished to return to Canada. Mr. Winans then referred to the coming of Detective Burt, and said that many detectives were the very scum and dregs of life. Who would condemn a good citizen on the word of such a man? Ex-Marshal Spangler, of Edgerton, was then spoken of. Both of them were after the reward, and forced Ashton to pay it. He spoke of how Burt put Mrs. Stone in the "sweat box" He did not say who clubbed Mr. Stone. He would not say it was Mrs. Stone, and he would not say it was the boy Alta Cady, but it wasn't Ashton or his wife. Burt and Spangler, Mr. Ashton insisted, must find some one guilty to get that $2,000 reward, so they charged it to Mrs. Stone, and she expected to be arrested the next day. No wonder the detective said she was nervous and excited.

"Do you wonder that she wanted to die?" Mr. Winans asked.

Mr. Winans held it to be incredible that any effort had been made to keep Marshal Spangler away from this trial. There was nothing to support it. Money was paid to Spangler by Ashton, but it was the reward for the discovery of Mr. Stone's assailant. It was not paid under any promises or in view of any agreement. Three parties were interested in that reward, Mr. Winans declared, Spangler, Burt and Lee Brown, all witnesses for the state in this trial.

The story of the attempted bribery of District Attorney Wheeler was declared to be the sheerest nonsense, unsupported by any testimony. The old man was sick and wanted to see the case settled in his life time. His act was the act of an ignorant man perhaps, but not of a corrupt man. He ought to have known that such a case could not be settled but he didn't, and wanted word taken to the district attorney, as the representative of law and order that he would pay a few thousand dollars to have the matter disposed of in his life time., Spangler and Brown disagreed as to that conversatian, however, and disagreed vitally. Brown's testimony stripped Spangler's of all suggestion of evil.

Ashton Concealed Nothing.

Ashton's frankness in offering all the information he had concerning Mrs. Stone's actions was dwelt upon in detail. The defendant had withheld nothing. He told fully about meeting Mrs. Stone on that Sunday morning—in fact it was from him that the state got most of its information. Ashton swore that the last time he saw Mrs. Stone was when she went into the house after feeding her chickens. Who had contradicted him? Nobody. He had the opportunity to kill Mrs. Stone it had been declared. So had three others, and one was in the house through it all—didn't leave until 8 o'clock when he hurriedly packed his grip and took it to Edgerton, leaving soon after for Chicago.

"I don't care whether you find that Mrs. Stone came to her death by violence," said Mr. Winans, "but where is the evidence to show that Matthew R. Ashton inflicted that violence. Opportunity and motive! Was it Mr. Ashton who had the opportunity and motive? Three others had that opportunity and had that motive."

The first post mortem made by Dr. McManus and Lord showed no evidence of violence, the speaker declared. This fact the jury should not forget. The next day another post mortem was made by Dr. Palmer. Dr. Palmer must have noted everything that he saw, and yet there was nothing, whatever, in those notes to indicate that he believed death came from violence. It was only when the doctor was put on the stand and came to add to his notes that he even hinted that those injuries were inflicted before death.

"There are two sides to this medical testimony," said Mr. Winans. "One side offered by the defense saying that death was caused by suicide; the other side, offered by the state, saying that death may have come by drowning.

Contradictions between testimony of Burt, Bradley and others as to how Mrs. Stone's body was taken from the cistern were pointed out. No two of the witnesses for the state had told the same story as to how the rope was placed. Nor did the doctors agree as to the injuries to clavicles and ribs.

When Were Those Bruises Inflicted?

There was more than a reasonable doubt raised by the medical testimony as to when the discolorations found on the body were produced. There was no evidence in the case showing positively that Mrs. Stone was dead before her body entered the water; and especially was there no evidence showing that the injuries were inflicted by Matthew Ashton. Nor was there anything to show that Ashton had any ill-will against Mrs. Stone, although there was plenty to show Mrs. Stone's ill-will toward Ashton. It was ill-will against Ashton that led to this prosecution. James Murwin, to whom the prosecution was due in great measure, owed money to the Stone estate and was disputing the claim. If Ashton went to prison that claim might be forgotten. There was a hungry horde of relatives, anxious to have the Stone will broken. Ashton's imprisonment would help their case.

Ashton had talked of his uncle's wealth, the state insisted. What was more natural? Who is there that does not occasionally gossip of the wealth of his friends. But Ashton had said that some day he was to be heir to his uncle's property. What of that? The man knew that he stood well with his uncle and knew that no other relatives ever came near the old man. His aspiration was a natural one. It was not a thing for which to send a man to prison. There was not proof enough to raise a suspicion against Ashton, to say nothing of enough to convict him.

An eloquent plea in behalf of the defendant's family—the wife, daughter and little boy—closed Mr. Winans' address. He pointed to the weeping group behind the rail, as he spoke. Even Ashton's eyes were moist, this being the first emotion that he had shown during the trial, the sight of his wife and children in tears being manifestly too much for him.

E. M. Hyzer Talks of Suicide.

A warm compliment to District Attorney Wheeler opened E. M. Hyzer's speech for the defense. The district attorney had shown a skill beyond his years in this case, Mr. Hyzer declared, but in so doing had really made the testimony brought out by the state seem more important than it really way. The immense responsibility resting upon the jury was pointed out. A man's citizenship, with all that it implied, trembled in the balance. Before taking away this citizenship, and making this man a slave of the state, his crime must be so clearly proved as to be beyond any possibility of doubt.

With this introduction Mr. Hyzer passed to an analysis of the evidence. Before any attention could be paid to charges against Ashton the state must have proven absolutely that Mrs. Stone did not commit suicide. A presumption that she did not commit suicide would not suffice. It must be proved beyond a preadventure that she did not meet death at her own hands. Mr. Hyzer insisted that this had not been done. The first thought of all the neighbors and the relatives of Mrs. Stone when they learned of her disappearance was that she had killed herself. They were lead to this thought by the circumstances surrounding life at the Stone house during the preceding weeks. Not a fact up to the morning of Sunday, June 5, pointed to anything but a suicidal death.

The removal of Mrs. Stone's body from the cistern was reviewed and the post mortem examinations were taken up. The entire mass of evidence regarding Mrs. Stone's injuries rested upon the examination made by Drs. Henry Palmer and James Mills and the report made by those men must be analyzed thoroughly and honestly. There never would have been a prosecution in this case had it not been for what Dr. Henry Palmer said after his examination. The point on which Dr. Palmer was to be criticized was that he did not come on the stand with the notes made at the post mortem but with those notes magnified after consultation with the expert witnesses for the state.

Dr. Palmer Arraigned.

"Whenever you find a man changing his testimony after reflection upon its consequences you may set that testimony as less reliable!" thundered Mr. Hyzer. "Dr. Henry Palmer was the first to discover traces of a criminal death in this case, and don't let it be forgotten that Dr. Palmer will not let the case go down for lack of other evidence!"

The testimony of Dr. Palmer was then reviewed in detail. The all-important point in this case was the clotting of blood under the skin. Dr. Palmer's notes contained not a hint of this clotting. It was in verbal statements made in consequence of the exigencies of a criminal trial that blood clots were mentioned. Not only were the blood clots discovered after the trial began, but the third rib was also attached to the sternum—another vital point—after it had it had been found necessary to the state's case to show that the attachment was unbroken.

Finishing the reading of Dr. Palmer's notes Mr. Hyzer turned to the jury and said:

"What have we got in this case now? We have a claim of strangulation; and I will assert without fear of contradiction, that the thought of strangulation never occurred to Dr. Palmer at the time of making those notes. There isn't a word of evidence in this case that the trachea was examined, although a fracture of the trachea would be inevitable had strangulation occurred."

Five or six vital points in Dr. Palmer's testimony had been changed since the trial began, Mr. Hyzer declared. Dr. Palmer had added the discolored spot on the left side of the neck. He had changed his testimony as to the breaking of the sternum between the second and third ribs. He had dropped out of sight the testimony as to hemorrhage from the inter costal artery, although it was important enough to find a place in his original notes. He had testified that the principal injury was at the throat, while in his notes the principal injury was said to be at the second rib. He had added the clots of blood. He had added "indications of choking." He had changed his statements as to whether the abrasions were caused before or after death. And it was on such testimony as this that the state's case depended.

Mr. Hyzer began his speech at 11 and did not finish until well on in the afternoon.

DRANK FROM A BOTTLE IN COURT

Suspicious Actions of a Party of Spectators at the Ashton Trial.

People in the circuit court room were startled yesterday to see a woman in the audience produce a bottle filled with a suspiciously red brown liquid and take a drink. Then she passed it along and those near her did likewise. Sandwiches followed and it looked like contempt of court until one woman whispered to another.

"Won't you have some of our lunch?"

The liquid was cold tea and the party in question bring their dinner with them each day.

CHIEF BROKE UP A DOG FIGHT.

Acheson Seeks a Doctor and Finds a Parcel of Red-Hot Sports.

A number of Janesville sports whose bank accounts did not permit them taking a trip to Jacksonville to witness the Corbett-Mitchell mill, concluded they would have a little sport among themselves. The tip was given out and they soon rallied in a back room of a west side business house. A premium seeking fox terrier and a home bred pet of the same species were to be matched. Barrels and boxes had been removed to make a pit, the home champion had been turned in the ring when the owner of the premium seeker entered with his favorite in his arms. A well-known operator of the corn exchange was selected as referee. Just as the arrangements had been completed, and while the referee was winding his watch, Chief of Police Acheson entered the front door, looking for a doctor. The party in the back room mistaking the officers mission, skedaddled out the back door. The fight was declared off, and a few minutes later the referee was seen on a load of grain headed toward the warehouse section of the city.

Western Washing Machines.

The Western Washing Machine is the best made, never has a washing machine been put on the market that gave such general satisfaction. Hundreds are now in use and not a word of dissatisfaction ever arises from the user. By a very fortunate coincidence we came in posession of a great number of these very popular machines, and knowing that they were a machine that is always in demand we bought them. We are happy to say the price paid by us is such as to allow us to sell this excellent washing machine for $2.70 each and make a nice margin. We also bought a large number of clothes wringers at a spot cash figure. They are the best wringers made and we will sell them for $1.25 each. SYNOPSIS OF "FOES IN AMBUSH."

CHAPTER I.

Major Plummer, an army paymaster, is crossing the plains with a safe of greenbacks for the garrison troops in Arizona. His cavalry escort is led by a veteran sergeant named Feeny. The party halts at Mereno's ranch, near Gila river. A stranger giving his name as "Ned Harvey" calls at that ranche and states that himself and a small party are escorting his two sisters across the plains. Their father, a wealthy citizen of Tucson, A. T., was to have met them near Moreno's but has failed to do so, and his children fear that he has fallen in with murderous Apaches. Half a dozen troopers, led by Corporal Donovan, are sent with the stranger as protection for his sisters. Later two of the troopers return grossly intoxicated and bringing a note signed "Ned Harvey," to the effect that Indians have burned the Harvey camp and carried off the girls. Feeny scents a ruse to rob the paymaster. Suddenly a beacon fire is seen at an army signal station in the crest of a distant range, a warning never displayed except the Apaches are on the warpath.

CHAPTER II.

Late that night a scouting party of United States cavalrymen, under Lieutenant Drummond, is crossing the plains from another direction toward Mereno's. One of the troop is a mysterious recruit, a former stage driver, named Bland. The riders stumble upon the body of a trooper, which proves to be Corporal Donovan. They descry the tell tale beacon at the signal station, and shortly after a second fire lights up the sky around Moreno's.

CHAPTER III.

Just after dark on the evening the beacon was lit at the signal station a draft wagon and a Concord piloted by the real Ned Harvey and conveying his sisters Ruth and Fanny, pass by the station on the way to Mereno's. The signal officer in charge, Sergeant Wing, has met the girls in Yuma, and after greeting them and whispering in young Harvey's ears the rumors about Indian raids starts to climb the signal hill. He is suddenly assaulted, lassoed and dragged to a tent, bound and gagged. At the same time the signal pile of dry fuel bursts into flames. At the sight of the signal beacon Major Plummer sends a second party of soldiers out to rescue the Harvey girls, leaving only Sergeant Feeny, the paymaster and his clerk and the stupified troopers to guard the safe.

CHAPTER IV.

Ranchman Mereno is secretly leagued with the "greaser" bandit gang of one Morales. Ned Harvey and his sisters reach Moreno's. Next two strangers ride up and ask for shelter. Feeney rebuffs them, and the fight opens. Major Plummer's party and the Harveys are barricaded in the ranch.

CHAPTER V.

Moreno openly joins the outlaws. They fire the ranch buildings. Feeney and Ned Harvey are ambushed.

CHAPTER VI.

The bandits led by a man in cavalry uniform plunder the ranch, carrying off the Harvey girls and the safe. Drummond's party arrives. Feeny and Harvey are found. Private Bland is missing from the ranks. Sergeant Wing and party arrive. Drummond starts in hot pursuit.

CHAPTER VII. Tells the story of the pursuit and the romance springing from it. Drummond has met the Harvey girls and is the hero of Ruth's fancy.

CHAPTER VIII. The trail leads to Morales' mountain cave.

CHAP. IX The troopers overtake the outlaws' train and cut out the Concord wagon containing the girls. Drummond is hurt, and Ruth turns nurse.

CHAP. X. Wing leads a party to recover the safe, is ambushed and wounded. Private Bland is Wing's uncle and a notorious outlaw.

CHAP. XI. Harveys, father and son, are rescued.

CHAPTER XII—Concluded.

ing shirts of flannel or buckskin, in scout worn trousers and Indian leggings, but with their prairie belts crammed with copper cartridges, their brawny brown hands grasping the browner carbine, their keen eyes peering straight into the faces of the thronging crowd, their bronze features set and stern, the whole car fairly bristles with men who have fought tribe after tribe of savage foes from the Yellowstone to the Sonora line, and who hold a savage mob in utter contempt. Here by the hub of the gatling's wheel stands old Feeny, close at the elbow of dark faced Drummond. C troop's first platoon, "mans" the gatling gun, and under its old leader of the Arizona campaigns "leads the procession" into the Garden City of the antebellum days. By Drummond's side is a railway official gazing ahead to see that every switch is properly set and signaling back to the engineer when to "slow," when to come confidently ahead. Behind the platform car come ordinary baggage and passenger coaches, black with men in the same rough, devil may care scouting rig. All, except their horses and horse equipments left with the quartermaster at Sidney station, the battalion has been run to Chicago exactly as it came from the plains, and Chicago's "toughs," who would have hooted and jeered perhaps at sight of polished brasses and natty uniforms, recoil bewildered before this gang of silent and disciplined "jayhawkers." Steadily, silently, ominously, the train rolls along. As it is rounding a curve several ugly looking fellows are seen running at speed toward the switch lever at the next street crossing. Excitedly the railway man clutches Drummond's elbow and points. Two troopers are kneeling close at hand.

Steadily, silently, ominously, the train rolls along.

"Shoot if they touch that switch," says Drummond, and instantly the locks click as the hammers are brought to full cock. The foremost runner is almost at the iron stand; his hand is outstretched to grasp it when a gasping, [illegible] cry reaches his ears. Glancing across his fellows scattering to [illegible] one look at the smooth face the cause; two carbines [illegible] him, and flat he throws himself on his face and rolls to one side amid derisive laughter from the strikers themselves. A little farther on a knot of surly rioters are gathered on the track. No warning whistle sounds, and the clanging bell is too far to the rear to attract their attention. "Out of the way there!" is the blunt, roughly spoken order. No time this for standing on ceremony. Vengeful and scowling the men spring aside, some stooping to pick up rocks, others reaching into their pockets for the ready pistol, but rocks are dropped and pistols undrawn as the train whirls rapidly by, and wrath gives place to mystification. Who—what are these strange, silent, stubbly bearded, sun tanned fellows in slouch hats, flannel shirts and the worn old black belts over the shoulder? Even the engine has its guard, and half a dozen of them, perched upon the tender, have leveled their carbines to flank and rear, ready to let drive into the crowd the instant a brick is heaved or a trigger pulled.

And so into the great stone station they roll, and here they find the platforms jammed with citizens—some drawn by curiosity, some active sympathizers in the strike, and many of them prominent leaders of the mob surging in the crowded thoroughfare without. The train has hardly come to a stand when from every direction the mass of outsiders is heaving up around it.

"Now, Feeny, clear the platform to the left. Take the other side, Wing," says Drummond quietly to the officer at the front door of the next car.

In the very fraction of a second the first sergeant and a dozen men have leaped from the deck, and straight into the heart of the crowd they go. "Back with ye! Out o' this!" are the stern, determined orders, emphasized by vigorous prods with the heavy carbine butts. Astonished at methods so prompt and decided, there is only such resistance as the weight and bulk of those in rear can offer, and that is but momentary. The sight of those gleaming gatling barrels, the stern, brief orders and the rapid, confident advance combine to overcome all idea of resistance. On both sides, at the head of the train, the huge crowd, half laughing, half suffocating, is heaved back upon itself and sent like a great human wave rolling up to the iron lattice at the office end. Meantime, without an instant's delay the battalion springs out from the cars, forms ranks on the north platform, counts fours, and then, arms at right shoulder, away it goes with swinging, steady tramp around the rear of the train, across the parallel rows of rails, and in another moment, greeted by tremendous cheers from the occupants of long lines and high tiers of stores, offices, business blocks, the grimy, dusty, war worn campaigners come striding down the crowded street. Heavens, how the people shout! Staid old burghers, portly business men, trot panting alongside, waving their hats and cheering themselves hoarse. "Them fellers hasn't no bouquets in their guns," is the way a street gamin expresses it.

"Whither are they going?" "What have they first to do?" is the cry. Police officials ride now with the captain temporarily in command; a carriage has whisked the colonel over to headquarters, but haste! haste! is the word. On they go, silent, grim, with the alkali dust of the North Platte crossing still coating their rusty garb. A great swing bridge looms ahead; a dozen police deploy on either side and check the attending crowd. Over they go at route step, and then, turning to the right, tramp on down a roughly paved street, growing dim and dimmer every minute with stifling smoke. Presently they are crossing snakelike lines of hose, gashed and useless; passing fire apparatus standing unhitched and neglected; passing firemen exhausted and listless. Then occasional squads of scowling men give way before their steady tramp and are driven down alley ways and around street corners by reviving police. Then the head of column turns to the left and comes full upon a scene of tumult—a great building in flames, a great mob surging about it defying police interference and bent apparently on gutting the structure from roof to cellar and pillaging the neighboring stores. Now, men of the —th, here's work cut out for you! Drive that mob, bloodlessly if you can, blood letting if you must!

The colonel is again at the head. All are on foot. "Left front into line, double time;" the first company throws its long double rank from curb to curb, Drummond, its commander, striding at its front, Wing, his subaltern, anxiously watching him from among the file closers. Already they have reached the rearmost of the rioting groups, and with warning cries and imprecations these are scurrying to either side and falling into the hands of the accompanying police. Thicker, denser grows the smoke; thicker, denser the mob.

"Clear this street! Out of the way!" are the orders, and for a half block or so clear it is. Then comes the first opposition. On a pile of lumber a tall, stalwart man in grizzled beard and slouching hat—evidently a leader of mark among the mob—is shouting orders and encouragement. What he says cannot be heard, but now, tightly wedged between the rows of buildings, the mob is at bay, and yelling mad response to the frantic appeals and gesticulations of their leader at least 2,000 reckless and infuriated men have faced the little battalion surging steadily up the narrow street.

"You may have to fire, Drummond," says the colonel coolly. "Get in rear of your company." Obedient, the tall lieutenant turns and follows his chief along the front of his advancing line so as to pass around the flank. He is not 50 paces from the pile on which the mob leader, with half a dozen half drunken satellites, is shouting his exhortations. Just as the lieutenant's arm is grazing grim old Feeny's elbow as he passes the first sergeant's station, a brick comes hurtling through the air, strikes full upon the back of the officer's unprotected head and sends him, face forward, into the muddy street. In the yell of triumph that follows, Wing's voice for an instant is unheard. Obedient to its principle, "Never load until about to fire," the battalion's carbines are still empty, but all on a sudden C troop halts. "With ball cartridges, load!" is Wing's hoarse, stern order. "Now aim low when I give the word. Fire by company. Company, ready!" and like one the hammers click. But no command "Aim" follows. "Look out! Look out! For God's sake don't fire! Out of the way!" are the frantic yells from the throats of the mob. Away they go, scattering down side streets, alley ways, behind lumber piles, everywhere—anywhere. Many even throw themselves flat on their faces to escape the expected tempest of lead. "Don't fire," says the colonel mercifully. "Forward, double time, and give them the butt. We'll support you." Down from the lumber piles come the erstwhile truculent leaders. "Draw cartridge, men," orders Wing in wrath and disappointment. "Now, butts to the front, and give them h—l. Forward!" And out he leaps to take the lead, dashing straight into the thick of the scattering mob, his men after him. There is a minute of wild yelling, cursing, of resounding blows and trampling feet, and in the midst of it all a single shot, and when Wing, breathless, is finally halted two squares farther on only a dozen broken headed wretches remain along the street to represent the furious mob that confronted them a few minutes before. Only these few and one writhing, bleeding form, around which half a dozen policemen are curiously gathered, and at whose side the battalion surgeon has just knelt.

"He's shot through and through," is his verdict presently. "No power can save him. Who is he?"

"About the worst and most dangerous ringleader of riot this town has known, sir," is the answer of one of the police officials. "No one knew where he came from either—or his real name."

And then in his dying agony the fallen demagogue turns, and the other side of his twitching face comes uppermost. Even through the thin, grizzly beard there is plainly seen an ugly, jagged scar stretching from ear to chin.

"This isn't his first row by any manner of means, if it is his last," says a sergeant of police. "Look at that! Who shot him anyhow?"

"I did," is the cool, prompt answer, and Sergeant Feeny raises his hand to his carried carbine and stands attention as he sees the surgeon kneeling there. "I did, and just in the nick of time. He had drawn a bead on our lieutenant, but even if he hadn't I'd have downed him, and so would any man in that company yonder." And Feeny points to where C troop stands resting after its charge.

"You knew him then?"

"Knew him instantly, as a deserter, thafe, highwayman and murderer—knew him as Private Bland in Arizona and would know him anywhere by that scar."

A policeman bends and wrenches a loaded revolver from the clutching, quivering fingers just as Wing comes striding back and shoulders his way into the group.

"Is he badly hurt, doctor? That was an awful whack."

"It is the lieutenant, sir," says Feeny respectfully, but with strange significance in his tone as he draws a policeman aside. "Look!"

And Wing, bending over, gives one glance into the dying face, then covers his eyes with hands and turns blindly, dizzily, away.

That evening a host of citizens are gathered about the bivouac of the battalion at the waterworks while the trumpets are sounding tattoo. A few squares away the familiar notes come floating in through the open windows of a room where Jim Drummond is lying on a most comfortable sofa, which has been rolled close to the casement where every whiff of the cool lake breeze can fan his face, and where, glancing languidly around, he contrasts the luxury of these surroundings with the rude simplicity of the life he has lived and loved so many years. Gray haired George Harvey, kindly Mrs. Stone, his sister; blissful, beautiful Fanny Wing with burly baby Harvey in her arms and her proud, soldierly husband by her side, and a tall, lovely, silent girl have all been there to minister to his needs and bid him thrice welcome and make him feel that here, if anywhere on earth, he is at home. And here the battalion surgeon and the family physician unite in declaring he must remain until released by their order, and here for three days and nights he is nursed and petted and made so much of that he is unable to recognize himself, and here sister Puss comes to cry over and kiss and bless him and in her turn to be made much of and forbidden to leave, and then, after her big brother's return to duty with the battalion, now being fed and feted by all the North Side, he must needs come over every evening to see her, and, now that presentable uniforms have arrived and the rough beards have been shaved and the men of the old regiment look less like "toughs," but no more like American soldiers as our soldiers look in the field of their sternest service, her sisterly pride in her big brother is beautiful to see—so is her self abnegation, for, somehow or other, though he comes to see her, he stays to look at Ruth Harvey, shy, silent and beautiful, and soon, as though by common consent, that corner of the big parlor is given up to those two, the tall, stalwart trooper and the slender, willowy girl. And one evening he comes earlier than usual in manifest discomposure, and soon it transpires that important orders have reached him. Fanny turns pale. "Are you—all—ordered back?" she cries and is for an instant radiant at his assurance that the order involves only himself. He is called to department headquarters to report in person to the general commanding, who is about to make a tour through the mountains in northwestern Wyoming and wants Drummond with the escort. She is radiant only until she catches sight of her sister's face. It is not so very warm an evening, yet she marshals the household out on the steps, out on the back veranda—anywhere out of that parlor, where, just as the faint notes of the trumpets are heard sounding their martial tattoo, and just as Lieutenant Wing, returning from a tiptoed visit to his sleeping boy and escaped for the moment from the vigilance of his wife, now happens to go blundering in—there is heard from the dimly lighted corner near the piano the sound of subdued sobbing, the sound of a deep, manly voice, low, soothing, wondrously happy, the sound—a sound—indescribable in appropriate English, yet never misunderstood—a sound at which Wing halts short, pauses one instant irresolute, then faces about and goes tiptoing out into the brilliant sheen of the vestibule lamps, into the brilliant gleam of his fond wife's questioning, reproachful eyes.

Wing gives one glance into the dying face.

And for all answer, it being perhaps too public a spot for other demonstration, Wing simply hugs himself.

That night, under the arching roof of the great railway station, the comrades, so long united by the ties of such respect and affection as are engendered only by years of danger and hardship borne in common, and now so happily united by a closer tie, are pacing the platform absorbed in parting words.

"Jim, think what a load I've had to carry all these five years and forbidden by my good angel to breathe a word of it to you."

"I can't realize my own happiness, old man. I never dreamed that, after she got out into the world and saw for herself, that she would remember her girlish fancy or have another thought for me."

"I know you didn't. Yet Fan says that ever since the voyage in the Newbern little Ruth has never had a thought for anybody else."

There is a moment's silence, then Wing speaks again:

"There has not been time for mother's letter to reach me. I had to write, of course, and tell her of the fate that at last befell him. Do you know I feel as though after all it was my hand that did it."

"How so?"

"Feeny says he knew him the instant that side of his face was turned toward him—the side my knife laid open years ago. That was a fatal scar."

THE END.

Realism In the Drama.

Realism in the drama is a great thing. The other day a London manager applied to a magistrate for permission to introduce a live infant in a fire scene. The child was to be rescued from a burning house by a collie dog, which was to climb a ladder and leap from a window with the baby in his mouth. The manager was highly indignant when his application was refused, and so was the affectionate father who had provided the baby for a nightly consideration.—Stageland.

CONVENIENCE FOR TRAVELERS.

A Packing Case For Rings, Stickpins and Other Precious Trinkets.

A dainty little case for holding rings and pins when traveling was recently described for the benefit of The Household and will commend itself to every woman. It is made of satin in any shade and lined with eider down flannel to match. The eider down flannel may be found in very choice shades in almost any store.

The case is 5 inches broad and 8 inches long, and two little bags made from satin ribbon 2½ inches wide, with drawing strings of satin baby ribbon, are tacked to the lining as shown.

The eider down flannel will be found especially adapted to hold the various hat, lace and stickpins that form part of a lady's toilet.

A bow of narrow satin ribbon is placed at the end which is pointed, with strings of the ribbon for tying the case together when it is filled and rolled up in readiness for the traveling bag or trunk.

How to Mend Kid Gloves.

Kid gloves are sewed with cotton thread. The manufacturers understand the difference in the material and use the most satisfactory. Thread of assorted shades, especially put up in twist for glove mending, can be bought in all large stores. It is a great mistake to mend gloves with silk, as it will cut the kid more than fine cotton thread, thus showing the mend more plainly. For the same reason it will not hold the edges of the kid so firmly. If a glove is badly torn or ripped, try to match its color with a bit of silk. Lay this under the torn part and baste it down in small stitches that do not show on the right side. Then draw the rip up as carefully as you can, taking up very little of the kid as you do so.

Buying Furs Out of Season.

Furs are a troublesome stock to carry over and therefore are at this season marked down, often to almost cost prices. It is therefore a good time to buy, providing you make a selection with judgment. Avoid extremes in styles, which when out of fashion, become oddities that attract unpleasant attention. Let your choice be a standard fur of good quality, shaped in a fashion that is unobtrusive and that will admit of modifications and changes as time passes.

Seal is always fashionable, but it is a costly fur. It may be said in a general way that brown and black furs are most popular after sealskin. Blue fox, silver fox and astrakhan are also fashionable. In selecting mink, bear in mind that there are many different kinds and qualities. Light and dark, coarse, medium and fine it can be found, but only the fine is really handsome. Choose the darkest color. Mink boas are still worn, but the newest is not the same size all along its length, as last winter, but widened in the middle in some such shape as a collar and so fashioned as to be capable of being turned up as a storm collar or down like a "tippet." Muffs this season are large; hence it is a good time to buy, for when small muffs come in again there will be ample material with which to concoct a new muff. There is no risk in buying any good black fur, for whatever the fashions black is always in style.

Laundering Shirts.

The glaze on a laundered shirt front is more the result of knack and practice than of any particular secret, though many persons think there is some way of preparing the starch that will give the required glaze. Wax, turpentine or borax can be added to the starch with good effect. A good plan when the shirt front has been ironed is to rub it all over with a piece of damp white castile soap and iron it over again. It is to the pressure of the iron that the gloss is in a great measure due.

Hygienic Laundry Bag.

A bag for soiled lingerie, handkerchiefs and collars is thus described by a Rural New Yorker correspondent: Make it of white butcher's linen, 40 inches long and the width of the material. Fold the goods and sew into a bag, having its opening in the middle. The bag is first embroidered with a scroll border in turkey red braid. A large bone ring is slipped over, dividing the bag into two compartments—the smaller for the handkerchiefs, collars and cuffs, the larger for lingerie. Such a bag is hygienic, for it is easily laundered, is always fresh and clean and is decidedly pretty.

CONVENIENT AND INEXPENSIVE.

MASS-MEETING TAME.

Indianapolis Unemployed Fail to Make a Public Demonstration.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 25.—The mass-meeting of the unemployed adjourned last night with little of an incendiary nature having transpired. The meeting was taken in hand by a few speakers in whom the men lacked confidence and cold water was thrown on every move for a public demonstration either against the Commercial club's poor food bureau or the city officials. There was a deep undertone of resentment against the existing system of providing work and food, but it did not crystalize into any well defined plan of action. A number of the men who were expected to act as leaders have received help and were not present.

Why? Why is Strictly Pure White Lead the best paint? Because it will outlast all other paints, give a handsomer finish, better protection to the wood, and the first cost will be less.

If Barytes and other adulterants of white lead are "just as good" as Strictly Pure White Lead, why are all the adulterated white leads always branded Pure, or

"Strictly Pure White Lead?"

This Barytes is a heavy white powder (ground stone), having the appearance of white lead, worthless as a paint, costing only about a cent a pound, and is only used to cheapen the mixture. What shoddy is to cloth, Barytes is to paint. Be careful to use only old and standard brands of white lead.

"Southern" "Red Seal" "Collier" "Shipman" are strictly pure, "Old Dutch" process brands, established by a lifetime of use.

This is a tale of an old maid and a cat:
Maid and a cat;
She thought the fur on pussy's back,
So spotless white,
Might be improved; and so, alack!
One winter night,
She thought that she would die it black.
It died all right.

HOT waffle venders are not so numerous as they use to be.

MR. and Mrs. E C. Johnson are visiting in Milwaukee this week.

THE old-fashioned scissors-grinder has almost entirely dissapeared.

A FEW coal dealers have made a reduction of twenty-five cents per ton.

MANUFACTURERS of cough remedies have reaped a rich harvest during the last few weeks.

REV. E. H. PENCE went to Madison today, to assist Rev. J. W. Cochran in special services tonight.

A NEW line of fine underwear just opened at J. W. Weisend's clothing store, the finest in the city.

TALK about hard times! It don't look like it to see the crowds pouring into Lowell's hardware store.

WE have been surprising the people of Janesville recently, but still there's more to follow. Watch our ad. Lowell Hardware Co.

REV, A. W. REENYAN of Beloit, will preach at the Baptist church this evening at 7:30 o'clock. An invitation to all is cordially extented.

REMINGTON type-writer, in good order, for sale on monthly payments; also nine show cases and one Badger cook stove. Lowell Hardware Co.

THERE will be a public ball given by the Town Committee at the Rockton hall, on Friday evening, Feb. 2, 1894. All are cordially invited to attend.

DEARBORN'S cigar store on the bridge is for sale. Owner has other business which takes all his time. Call at store or office room 11, Sutherland block.

MR. and Mrs. P. S. Baker entertained a party of little girls at the Park Hotel last evening in honor of the birthday of their little three year old daughter Pearl. The children had a happy hour and went home delighted.

O. H. MEAD, the local artist, has just completed a life-size crayon portrait of Burns taken from an etching belonging to President James Mills, which will on exhibition at the Armory tonight.

REV. T. S. OADAMS of Iowa, will give his popular lecture "Rome and Its Environments," at the auditorium of Court Street church next Tuesday evening. Mr. Oadams is a popular speaker and his lecture is one of the best before the public.

TOMORROW will be the last Saturday that you can buy all goods in the clothing store of J. H. Weisend, in the Phoebus block, one door east of Wisch's barber shop, at cost, as after January 31, the cost sale will be discontinued on all goods except overcoats, heavy weight suits and winter underwear. So take advantage of this bonafide cost sale tomorrow.

WE sell anthracite hard coal, grate, egg, range. No. 4 nut. Soft coal, bird's eye cunnel, West Virginia splint, Hocking Indiana block, Illinois, and the celebrated Pocahontas for ranges. JANESVILLE COAL CO.
J. H. Gateley, Manager.

"How can you sell all these goods so cheap, did you steal 'em?" was a remark heard in Lowell's store this morning. "No we didn't steal them, but we have reduced bargain hunting to a science. That accounts for it. See?"

WHEELOCK'S great sale of white granite ware is attracting a great deal of attention. It is the best white granite ware made, and as the sale lasts but four days longer, you had better go there at once. The prices they are naming will never be duplicated. See them in this issue.

THE "Bell's" great cut price sale will commence in the morning. They name a few articles in today's Gazette, everything else kept in the store is in proportion. Go there tomorrow and you can save money.

HUNDREDS have tried the India tea offered by Grubb at 50 cents a pound and all have pronounced it excellent. No better tea was ever drank. Several merchants in the city have been selling this tea in packages for $1.00 a pound, and Mr. Grubb thinking it was too much sent an importer's order for it and is now selling it at 50 cents a pound. This is in the same proportion as he sells other goods. Everything the best and always the cheapest.

WEISEND'S new clothing store in the Phoebus block opposite the postoffice is the finest arranged clothing store in the city, the main room being occupied as a gents' furnishing goods and hat department. In the rear end is the children's clothing department and in the addition is the new men's and boyes' clothing department. The store is now finely arranged and Weisend says he is now ready for his Saturday's big trade. Everybody is invited to call and see the store.

WHY?

Taste of "Royal Ruby Port Wine" and you will know why we call it "Royal." A glass held up to the light will show why we call it Ruby. $500 reward for any bottle of this wine found under five years old, or in any way adulterated. It is grand in sickness and convalescence, or where a strengthening cordial is required; recommended by druggists and physicians. Be sure you get "Royal Ruby," don't let dealers impose on you with something "just as good." Sold only in bottles; price, quarts $1, pints 60 cts. Bottled by Royal Wine Co. Sold by

Will Be a Blessing.

The person who uses a telephone and hangs the receiver up without "ringing off" can have no idea to what extent his action works upon the mind of Miss Central and suggests to her the hiring of a man to say things for her. There are also things to be said on behalf of the man whom Miss Central cuts off in the middle of a sentence; but perhaps most of these things have been said already. An invention is now being tested by the Metropolitan telephone company of this city, which is expected to do away with "ringing off." This device consists of a miniature incandescent lamp in front of the operator, which flashes whenever a receiver is hung up after the completion of the conversation. It is said by President Cutler, of the telephone company, that the device is working very well and may be adopted for use on all the switchboards of the company.—N. Y. Sun.
